SILVER LININGS

A Note from the Editor

There's something about October on the Comstock that makes the past feel especially close. As the nights grow colder and the winds whistle through the old wooden buildings of Virginia City, Gold Hill, Dayton, and the shadowed mouth of the Sutro Tunnel, the echoes of our history seem to stir again.

In the boomtown days, this was a place of unrelenting energy—miners deep underground, lights glowing late in saloons, and families carving out lives on the edge of fortune and danger. With that intensity came tragedy and triumph in equal measure, leaving behind stories that still cling to the walls, streets, and tunnels of our hills.

Today, Halloween on the Comstock—now fondly called Hauntober—celebrates that same mixture of wonder and remembrance. Costumed parades, cemetery tours, and ghost walks around Dayton and Virginia City remind us that our community thrives not only because of its living spirit, but because it honors those who came before us. Each October, our historic towns invite visitors to step into that long continuum—to feel, just for a night, the nearness of the generations who built this place.

As you walk down C Street, stand before the old mills of Dayton, or look toward Sutro's silent portal in the hills, listen for the whispers of history beneath your feet. The Comstock has always been alive with stories—and on Halloween, it simply speaks a little louder.

OHV Heaven - Where History Meets the Open Trail

Dayton, Nev., is quickly becoming known as "OHV Heaven," where the thrill of off-highway adventure meets the rich history of the Comstock. A new trail initiative led by the Friends of Sutro Tunnel Charity (FoSTC) is bringing together a coalition of partners to make that vision a reality — connecting outdoor recreation, historic preservation, and community pride.

Since January 2025, FoSTC has been working closely with local, state, and federal agencies, along with private property owners, to coordinate approvals and ensure the development of safe, sustainable routes. The project includes both a motorized trail and a non-motorized trail, each offering a unique way to explore the rugged landscape

Mark Twain Days

PINE NUTS

By McAvoy Layne
The Ghost of Mark Twain

Maybe like you, I got gobbled up in Carson City's Third Annual Mark Twain Days, and could not feel any better for the rendezvous. We were greeted with a warm welcome by Nevada State Folklorist and Master of Ceremonies, Brad McMullen: "The legacy of Mark Twain and his contemporaries lives on in each of us, so get out there and start spreading some tall tales. It's your responsibility as a Nevadan!"

First things first, we cut a red ribbon to the brand new Mark Twain Reading Room in the Nevada State Library, where we were reminded that, "The man who does not read good books, has no advantage over the man who cannot read them." Then we sat down to read Roughing It.

Next came the Grand Opening Reception at the Brewery Arts Center Exhibition Hall, featuring a stunning display of early editions of the Gold Hill

News, along with some enlightening remarks from David Moore on the influence that Mark Twain had on early Nevada journalists, including David's own distinguished career.

That evening featured a Chautauqua performance of colorful Nevada characters by students of Kathryn Kelly's outstanding Hope Academy, and they brought the house down. You just can't top youth Chautauqua...

My back then decided to take a little holiday and went Absent Without Leave, so I missed out on this year's V&T Twain Train, and the Kids' Fishing Day at Baily Pond, but was able to sashay up alongside Miss Julia Bulette (portrayed by the Legend of the Valley, Kim Harris) for an evening of fun and folklore that garnered a sustained standing O for the performance art of Chautauqua. It was an evening after which I could have easily retired to a satisfying dirt nap...

I hated to miss the Lowbrow Social at the State Museum, because I was just born to join such a gathering of loveable old Jack Leg Liars.

Even though my back was forcing me to forgo several fun events, I was in Twain Haven, as for the past forty years, every day has been a Twain Day for me. And I did get to partake in a namesake lager inside my favorite thirst parlor, the Twain Room of the Fox, where they continue to pour their Mark Twain Lager on tap, YUM!

Next year, once I locate my back again, I'm going to partial the live music at the Nashville Social Club, the Twain Ghost Walk, and try my hand at the Adult Paint and Sip, which sounds like it might be right in my wheelhouse...

I guess my favorite comment on this year's Twain Festival might have come from a nine-year-old Hope Academy student, who raised his hand when asked by the teacher of his history class, "Are there any questions?"

Well, his hand shot up like a Coast Guard Rescue Flair, and he asked with no little excitement in his voice, "Yes! When is the next Mark Twain Days Chautauqua?!"

Sam would be proud...

Virginia City Marks 150 Years Since the Great Fire

Story and Photos by Steph Norby

Various generations of fire apparatus on the Comstock.

Sunday, Oct. 26 marked 150 years since the Great Fire of 1875 in Virginia City, one of the most devastating events in the town's storied history. Locals and visitors gathered in the Bucket of Blood/Delta Saloon parking lot to remember the tragedy and honor the resilience of those who lived through it.

The Great Fire broke out around 5:30 a.m. at an A Street boardinghouse and raged for nearly nine hours, fueled by strong winds and dry timber. The flames eventually fizzled out around 2:30 p.m., destroying more than 2,000 homes and businesses, causing an estimated $20 million in losses to the Comstock — the equivalent of more than $525 million today.

Despite the immense destruction, only two deaths were directly attributed to the blaze (a third victim later succumbed to injuries from the fire). The impact reached far beyond the Comstock.

"The impact was felt throughout the U.S. as the market was so heavily impacted by the concern for the mines in the area," noted Storey County Fire Protection District on their Facebook page.

Local historian Joe Curtis addressed the crowd during the commemoration, reflecting on both the devastation and the determination that followed. "So we're back here today, in 2025, recognizing what these guys did to try to save this community and then help it to come back to what it is today."

Curtis noted that remnants of the fire still exist beneath the surface. Residents living on the lower end of town — once the industrial district — can find historical artifacts buried on their properties from debris hauled down the hill after the fire as the community began to rebuild. Within just a year or two, nearly all of Virginia City's iconic structures had been reconstructed, marking the town's incredible recovery.

Today, you can stop by the Virginia City Visitor's Center to pickup a "Great Fire of 1875 Visitor Card", which showcases landmarks impacted by the fire and encourages guests to visit each location and learn more about area history.

For those interested in fire-fighting during the Comstock Lode era, Steve Frady's book Red Shirts and Leather Helmets offers an in-depth look at the history and heroism of those who faced the flames.

The Great Dayton Water War of 1904

By Chris Pattison, Proprietor of The Odeon, Dayton

Long before HOA complaints and Facebook arguments, Dayton had its own "Nextdoor Drama."

It all started across the Carson River, where the hardworking Cassinelli family farmed their land and irrigated crops the old-fashioned way - by moving a few boards in the ditch to share the flow. Well, one neighbor didn't see it that way. Rumor has it, she believed the Cassinelli's were "stealing her water."

Now, in most towns, that's grounds for a stern letter. But in 1904 Dayton? It was grounds for a shotgun blast.

Pietro Cassinelli was tending his irrigation when BOOM! — he caught some pellets in the back from an irritated neighbor named Carmelinda Venturi. Don't worry, Pietro survived (and probably had the best "You think you're having a bad day?" story in town).

Carmelinda, meanwhile, got herself arrested and was locked up upstairs in the Odeon Hall - yes, our very own building! Turns out the Odeon wasn't just for dancing, drinking, and live music... it was also the "temporary women's jail."

Now here's where it gets very Dayton: When the sheriff realized Carmelinda was pregnant and caring for a baby, the town basically shrugged and said, "Well, guess she's had a rough week - let her go."

And that's exactly what happened. She went home, Pietro healed up, and the two families stayed neighbors for decades - proof that Dayton folks can feud hard, forgive fast, and still show up to church together the next Sunday.

So next time you're enjoying a drink at the Odeon, raise a glass to the Cassinelli's, a family that helped build Dayton's history, one irrigation ditch (and wild story) at a time.

Dayton Valley Lions Club

By Steph Norby - Photos via Dayton Valley Lions Club

The Dayton Valley Lions Club was chartered in 2000 and has continuously served Dayton, Stagecoach, Virginia City and everywhere in between. This year marks 25 years of helping with local projects, leading fundraisers, and providing much needed services and resources to community members. Leading the club is longtime member Jack Epperson, who has dedicated two decades to the organization.

Epperson has worn many hats within the Lions Club, from our local chapter to international leadership. He became president of the Dayton Valley Lions his second year with the club. From there, he moved up to zone chair, region chair, then district governor where he was responsible for all 45 clubs in Nevada. In 2014, he was elected to the Lions Club International Board for a two-year term. Epperson was only the second person from Nevada to be an international director.

"When I came back [to Dayton], the club was a little sluggish at that point ... that's when I became president (again) and we rebuilt the club," he remembered.

Today, one of the Lions' main projects is sight preservation work. The Dayton club has more certified vision screeners than any other in the district, now at 50 clubs strong.

"Back in 1925, Helen Keller was at our international convention and challenged the Lions to be 'Knights of the Blind in the Crusade against Darkness', so the Lions accepted that challenge and we've been associated with sight preservation ever since," Epperson explained.

Club members conduct vision screenings in schools and at local events, referring them to eye care specialists whenever necessary. In fact, they just started screenings with four Storey County schools earlier this month and want to continue to expand their reach. Last year, the Dayton club taught Carson City Lions how to conduct screenings, which has helped more than 1,200 students in the neighboring capital.

"If the person that we refer is uninsured or under-insured, we'll take care of it," Epperson noted. "Then we will provide both the exam and the eyeglasses."

The club also collects used eyeglasses, sending them to recycling centers for redistribution to countries like India, the Philippines, and South America. Local Dayton drop boxes include Dayton Family Vision, Stor-All and Frugoli Family Dentistry.

Beyond sight preservation, the club is deeply involved in a wide range of community efforts, with partnerships playing a key role in their success. The Lions provide fans to local senior centers, host quarterly food drives in collaboration with the Healthy Communities Coalition and Grocery Outlet, and most recently partnered

Stolen 1955 Pickup Recovered, Suspect Arrested

Storey County Sheriff's Office

On the morning of October 8, 2025, a 1955 Ford truck and Polaris quad were stolen from the house of a recently deceased resident of Virginia City. Storey County Sheriff's Office Detectives identified a suspect and conducted surveillance on his movements.

On October 24, 2025 Storey County Sheriff's Office Detectives began visiting recent locations the suspect had been at. While on scene at one location in Lyon County, information was obtained that lead to the discovery of the stolen truck. The truck was located inside of a storage warehouse near the bottom of Six Mile Canyon Road in Lyon County, Nevada.

Storey County Sheriff's Office Detectives worked with the Lyon County Sheriff's Office and were able to successfully recover the truck. The suspect, identified as Wayne Wofford, was arrested by Lyon County Sheriff's Office for possession of the stolen truck and booked into the Lyon County Detention Center.

The Ford truck was recovered and is being stored until family members can take possession. This is still an active case. The Storey County Sheriffs Office would like to thank the Lyon County Sheriff's Office for their expeditious response and assistance.

with the Knights of Columbus to support the Coats for Kids program. They also contributed to the development of the Dayton Valley Dog Park, support free yoga classes at the Dayton Branch Library, and donated funds for both the kitchen and playground at the Dayton Boys & Girls Clubhouse—along with installing the new flagpole onsite. In addition, the club donates gift cards to Central Lyon Fire to help families in need after a house fire. And that's just the short list.

Fundraising is another major part of their year, and one project has become a holiday favorite – selling See's Candy at Smith's in Dayton. Look for their table inside the store the week before Thanksgiving until Christmas (or when they run out).

"People have joined our Lions Club just to sell See's Candy," Epperson chuckled. "We sell hundreds, hundreds of pounds."

So do not feel bad about satisfying your chocolate craving – the money you spend on See's goes right back into supporting your community through Lions Club programs.

Based on their literature, Lions Clubs International is the world's largest service club organization, with more than 1.4 million men and women improving their communities while making a difference locally and globally. If you are interested in joining or learning more, the Dayton Valley Lions Club meets the fourth Wednesday of each month at the Dayton Community Center at 6 p.m.

The Virginia Truckee Railroad Presents The Masquerade Murder Mystery Train

Virginia & Truckee Railroad

The Virginia & Truckee Railroad invites you to a unique experience: the Masquerade Murder Mystery Train, presented by the Funtime Players. This special event takes place on Saturday, November 8, with performances at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. Under the enchanting glow of the full moon, guests will be swept into an old-fashioned murder mystery filled with intrigue, deception, and deadly secrets.

The Masquerade Experience

Set against the flickering lantern light within historic Pullman cars, the evening begins with a masquerade ball murder mystery. Behind every mask lurks a secret, and every smile hides suspicion. As the train travels through the moonlit Comstock's Flowery mountains, passengers become part of the unfolding story—observing, questioning, and piecing together clues from the suspects. In this immersive adventure, anyone could be the culprit, and you become the detective charged with solving the crime before the final whistle blows.

Honoring Hollywood's Masters of Horror

The event also pays tribute to two legends of classic horror cinema: Bela Lugosi and Boris Karloff. Their iconic performances as Dracula and Frankenstein's Monster helped define the golden era of gothic film, adding an extra layer of atmosphere and suspense to the evening. Event Details
